Title Search Shows Origin of Wolf Road

Origin of the name of Wolf road, one of Cook county's longest north and south highways, was revealed in the tracing of the title to Woodland Acres, the Robert Bartlett Realty company's newest development, a 264 acre tract adjoining Mokena on the west and south.

According to F. E. Merrill, sales manager of the firm, the once powerful Algonquin Indian tribe which inhabited New York state in the 17th century was divided into three major clans known as the "Bear", the "Wolf" and the "Turtle".

In 1670 the "Wolf" clan moved westward to what is northern Indiana and Illinois now. Many of its members made their hunting grounds in the Kankakee area and over a period of years beat a well traveled trail to the north.

This trail was named "Theak-a-kee Yan-ack-ee" which, according to translators, means "the trail of the wolf thru the wonderful land." White settlers changed the name to Wolf trail and later to Wolf road, the name it bears today.

Woodland acres comprises the former Cappel estate and was bought by Bartlett thru Grover C. Elmore & Company, brokers, represented by Franklin Eulette. Most of the land fronts on Wolf road. Some of the southern part is on the east side of that highway. Hard roads connecting with Wolf road are under construction. Much of the land is wooded with virgin timber.

The property is to be sold in one, two, and five acre tracts ranging upward in price from $395.

Mokena Red Cross War Fund Drive Exceeds Quota

Although the intensive drive ended the sixth day of this month it has taken the balance of this time for us to reach our goal. I am very pleased to report that this morning receipts put the thermometer just over the Five Hundred Dollar mark. There may be further contributions before the end of the month, when the Drive officially ends, and I know we would all like to see the red in the thermometer pushed right up to the top. All Associations and Church societies have contributed this year and without their help we would still be a long way from the goal. The Civic Association so far has been the largest contributor, $25.00, followed by one $10.00 contribution, a $6.50 contribution by the PTA and twenty five $5.00 contributions, in this bracket are most of the Church organizations. There are some $3.00 contributions, some for $2.50, $2.25, $2.00 and a great many of $1.00. These are followed by quite a few less than a dollar contributions.

New Lenox Home Destroyed By Mystery Fire

While Mr. and Mrs. Gus Cegler and daughter Isabella were visiting with relatives in Chicago over the weekend, fire of undetermined origin broke out in their home in the south subdivision of New Lenox early Sunday morning and completely destroyed the dwelling. Mr. Egner, brother in law of Mr. Cegler residing next door to the Cegler home was the first to notice the fire at about 4:00 o'clock in the morning.

He called the New Lenox fire department but the fire gained such a headway that the small 4-room cottage was practically destroyed before the fire department could get on the scene.

The Cegler family were notified of the fire. Mr. Cegler had just bought $30.00 worth of work clothes which fell prey to the flames and he was obliged to get a priority for more shoes. By strange coincidence the grocery boy left the Saturday order of groceries next door when he discovered the Cegler's absent.

The Ceglers are residing at present in the Egner home. The loss is partially covered by insurance, and damage estimated at $4000.00

PATRIOTIC PAGE STARTS IN THIS ISSUE; RUNS 4 WEEKS

The U. S. Treasury Department advocates sponsored advertising as the only method that the Treasury department has for promoting paid advertising of war bonds through newspapers, and it is only through continued voluntary and patriotic contributions on the part of local professional and business leaders that the fact can be kept in front of the public of the urgent necessity of continuing and increasing purchases of treasury securities to help win the war.

The publishers who now have regular sponsors for weekly newspapers for definite periods of time, reaching from 3 months to a full 52 weeks are requested by the Treasury Department to substitute a new series during April for a new kind of War Bond ads now on hand.

This newspaper has succeeded in securing sponsors for a four weeks program beginning with this issue. Next week this page will be devoted to the second War Loan of 13 billion dollars which starts April 12. The succeeding two weeks will carry special messages pertaining to the war effort. Read over the names of the business and professional sponsors from the various communities appearing in this special patriotic page in this issue.

In a letter to the weekly newspapers of the United States, the Treasury department in Washington makes the following statement:

"As you a newspaper publisher are well aware of the function of the Treasury Department to encourage and give direction to the work of voluntary organizations charged with the immediate responsibility of selling war securities to the American people, but the final success of the large war financing operation must be the responsibility of each and every American."

The splendid cooperation the Treasury Department has had from the press of this country leads us to believe you will welcome the advance information of the advertising phase of the second war loan starting April 12.

We are confident that we can count upon you to help make this the greatest drive for dollars in all history—the outstanding success that it can and must be."

WILL SPONSOR CARD PARTY

The Green Garden and Manhattan Home Bureau Units will co-sponsor a public card and bunco party to be given at the Manhattan Grange Hall, Tuesday, Marh 30 at 7:30.

About New York:

Wall Street begins with a graveyard, ends in a river and once was a sheep pasture . . . Make your own wisecrack . . . One of the best food spots is the Telephone Company's cafeteria on West Street. For the convenience of phone workers, but common folks like the rest of us are admitted . . . For a whiff of British atmosphere take a walk along Thames Street. It is where ye olde chop houses and taverns are located, as well as architecture patterned after London's side streets. (And don't forget to bring your monocle, Mr. Jessel) . . . The green door at the top of the left-hand stairway on the mezzanine in Madison Square Garden leads to the most exclusive club in town—for the Garden's owners, stockholders and friends . . . It also has a library, a taproom and a cocktail lounge . . . The large pew in St. Paul's Church on lower Broadway has the coat of arms of the U. S., because it once was occupied by General Washington and his family. But you may sit in it.

Our town doesn't produce one thing to feed, clothe or warm us. Everything we use is shipped in . . . You can get the best view of the majestic steel poetry of the G. Washington Bridge from the Cloisters at Fort Tryon along the Drive. Leaves you breathless. (You must see it, Cong. Hoffman) . . . Pitman's, a pub on South Street, contains all the luscious flavor that you see in Western movies . . . A New Yorker need not travel far to find natural wonders. He may enjoy them by simply walking along the Hudson—more beautiful, we are told, than the Rhine or Danube . . . The clientele at the Hotel Taft is so cosmopolitan, many of the maids and clerks there are required to speak several languages . . . The false walls to be found in Chinatown cellars were erected to mark dividing lines between different Tong.

For some unknown reason, women are admitted to the men's bar at the Plaza only after the Stock Exchange closes . . . Those caves in Central Park were once homes of Indians . . . Some of the most valuable property in town is in Harlem, where poverty is king . . . J. P. Morgan buys his coffee on Maiden Lane, with his ration card, of course . . . He prefers the green bean and roasts it himself . . . The Bowery Jewel Market (near Canal and Hester) resells gems containing loving inscriptions. Mementoes of dead romances . . . The Siamese Consulate has the softest snap. Never has to take care of more than a half dozen Siamese nationals . . . The Hapsburg Restaurant on 55th Street, until recently, featured a hat-check girl who gave you a dime with your hat . . . It's an interesting city, Our Town . . . Which out-of-towners allege is a nice place to visit, but not to live in . . . But more people live in New York City than anywhere in the world.

It happened during the recent FBI raid on Tough Touhy and Basil Banghart in Chicago . . . John Edgar Hoover, leading the raid in the pitch black night, gun in hand, accidentally stepped on a sleeping cat . . . The G-Man's surprise—you can well imagine—was as startling as the pussy's!

But what we started out to report was a comment of Banghart, who said: "Mr. Hoover, please send me to Alcatraz. I hate where I was!" . . . Mr. Hoover asked: "What's wrong with it? It has a nice, big, stone wall, to keep out the riff-raff!" . . . To which Banghart whined: "I don't like it there. Too many thieves. They are the worst card-cheats of all!"

You've probably read it before. That's how we got it. But it belongs here, we think. It's too good for the opposition, anyhow.

It's the one about the cook on a destroyer, who was sooooo seasick. The Captain, on the bridge, was cold and hungry. He sent a Lt. below to bring back a couple of ham-and-egg sandwiches . . . The officer found the cook prostrate across a table . . . "A couple of ham-and-egg sandwiches for the Captain, pronto!" he barked.

"Ohhhh!" groaned the agonized cook. "I'm sooooo sick. I just couldn't look at food. Please go awaaaaaay!"

"Don't you know what will happen if you don't?" asked the Lt.

"What can happen—what can happen?" groaned the cook.

"The Captain will come down here and shoot you!"

"Ohhhh," was the retort, "I WISH HE WOULD!"

The reason the National Press Club again did not hold its annual dinner for FDR was that the Secret Service nixed it. Tradition demands it be held in that building . . . Several newspapers are offering fancy salaries to scribes over 35, but require signing of a waiver to all job rights 60 days after the Armistice . . . OPA men are visiting swank spots to inspect food stocks and "hoarding, if any" . . . Averell Harriman may inherit Winant's London post if Winant enters the Cabinet.

Eighty-Three Days on a Raft in Atlantic

Convicts Make Goods for Battlefronts

While many of their friends and relatives are in the armed forces, inmates of San Quentin, Calif., prison have turned to war work within the grim gray walls of the very institution which keeps them from joining in the fighting. Much of the goods now produced in the shops and yards of the prison now go to use on the farflung battlefields of the world. These men are stripping insulation from old electric cables brought to the prison from civilian scrap piles and from the battlefields themselves.

The new coin, composed entirely of solid soft steel, with a zinc plating, replaces the old copper coin which contained 95 per cent copper, 4 per cent zinc and 1 per cent tin. Jack Kastrin is shown (right) at the coin stamping machine. The machine produces the Lincoln head on one side and the "One cent, United States of America" on the obverse side.

Primitive Labor

A picture out of an ancient world, primitive tools, bullock carts and hand labor, but all so necessary to the modern scheme of things, particularly war, for here is being constructed an air field for American fighter, bomber and transport planes. A young girl laborer rests upon her crude tool. Broken stone, used to make a bed for the landing strip, is brought in by women who carry it in baskets upon their heads.

'FLYING MINUTE MEN'

(The brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, is awarded this week to the Civil Air Patrol.)

This brass ring goes not to one man but to 68,000 men and women. They are members of the Civil Air patrol who have been fighting the war in little single-motor planes flying within the boundaries of the United States, and who carry the torch for the future of civil aviation in this country.

How long they will be allowed to carry that torch is the important question. At present they are orphans of the storm—carrying military responsibilities without military standing. They fight submarines, but they had to fight for weapons first. The army and WPB are slowly throttling them by refusing new equipment or repair parts. Thus in order to keep their gradually deteriorating machines going, the Civil Air patrol is almost certain to be swallowed by the army.

The army has been wanting to take over because civilian fliers in wartime are considered a nuisance by the military—with justification in some cases.

Youths and Fathers.

But the owners of 25,000 private planes thought they had something to offer. The younger ones went into military service. Others, many being married men with families, organized the Civil Air patrol, which for more than a year has been flying the coastal waters and maintaining a courier service throughout the United States.

These are the "Flying Minute Men." At first their submarine patrol was merely a spotting job. If they spotted a submarine, they were supposed to radio a shore base and then hover around waiting for a bomber to come to the scene of action. But they had so many heart-rending experiences, that they clamored for bombs of their own. They would dart low over the water, discover a submarine location, radio to a shore base, hold the contact, hover and pursue—and then sometimes lose the prey because the army never came along.

For months they called in vain for bombing equipment. War department insisted that no civilians are allowed to carry weapons, and thus the Civil Air patrol should not be armed. The army would not even release life rafts, and as a result several CAP pilots have lost their lives on submarine patrol.

Finally the restriction was waived, and today these little single-engine planes carry small bomb racks, bombs, and bomb sights.

But they have not been allowed to reveal the success of their submarine patrol. War department calls it "military information," and insists that CAP shall say no more than that they have "attacked" submarines—without indicating the result.

Subs Sunk.

But we can reveal that submarines spotted by CAP observers have actually been sunk. The authority for this statement is Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the army air corps, who also emphasizes that these "Flying Minute Men" have provided their own planes, tools, radios, and other equipment.

A year ago German submarines were sinking merchant ships within sight of the Atlantic coast. This brazen activity ceased after establishment of the Civil Air patrol. The submarines were driven into deep waters, for the small planes, flying low and flying slowly, were able to do a better job of spotting than big patrol bombers which whizzed past the scene too rapidly for close observation.

WHY THE JAPS KNOW

Here is an excerpt from the interior department's annual 1941 report, which indicates why the Japs know so much about the Aleutian Islands:

"The floating plant Kosei Maru, with auxiliary craft consisting of 9 trawlers, was engaged from May to August, 1940, in taking halibut and cod in Bering Sea about 100 miles northeast of the Pribilof Islands, with one additional trawler during the last week or two of the season. The vessel was reported to have left for Japan toward the end of August.

"This is the eleventh consecutive year that Japanese floating plants have operated in these waters, the number of vessels having varied from one to four, with the usual complement of tenders."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

War Transport Czar Joe Eastman says he gets a bushel of letters and postcards every week suggesting that he bar Mrs. Roosevelt from traveling . . . Old Washington observers who have seen previous Presidents suffer from getting out of touch with the nation, wish FDR had two Mrs. Roosevelts to keep him posted about U. S. sentiment. Any President who loses contact with the people is finished, and every President, especially in wartime, has to keep close to his desk.

That's the Question
"Shall we live with your parents?"
"Can we live without them?"

His Turn Next

At the end of the third round the heavyweight boxer staggered to his corner in a dazed and battered condition.

His manager approached the fighter and said sweetly: "Here, Butch, I've got a great idea! Next time 'e 'its you, 'it 'im back!"

Indians of the Amazon River region made the first rubber overshoes, which were imported into the U. S. in 1900.
Mistakes of many kinds can cut into the rubber conservation program, as is indicated by the fact that normally 180,000 pounds of rubber was used annually in the manufacture of pencil mark erasers.
Before vulcanization was discovered in 1839 rubber goods hardened like rock in winter and melted in summer. Early rubber goods manufacturers suffered severe financial losses because of the unreliability of their products. That was many years ago.
A check of the tires on 500 vehicles recently disclosed that 60% were under-inflated, even to the extent of from 10 to 15 pounds. This is a heavy waste of rubber because it has been found that 30 per cent under-inflation permits the return of only 74 per cent of the mileage built into a tire.

MURDER at PIRATES' HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT

W-N-U RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $800 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. Judy bids for the church and gets it, only to find, in an old chest, the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane. The body disappears a few hours later. A fish shed burns, apparently killing an old man named Brown who is supposed to have lived there. When the anonymous letter disappears, Judy tells Victor Quade. While exploring the "Pirate's Mouth" for clues, Lily Kendall sees something which frightens her. With Victor, Judy is looking for her bag.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER XII

I'd thought it a wild cry coming from the sea.

Victor heard it, too. "Just a gull, probably. They sound like that." He was halfway up the stairs. "Come on, Judy."

I saw him hesitate, run a little way back and inspect the waters around the bluff; then, just when I was wondering if he were going to go down into the Pirate's Mouth after whatever was there, he came back and made for the inn, two steps at a time. I could hardly keep up with him.

"Only a gull," he reiterated. "Nobody's been down there, evidently."

Our guests had scattered. I could see Bessie Norcross' white coat disappearing into the house, with some man holding the door for her. Hugh, no doubt. The others were out of sight, save the minister. He had stopped by the fire ruins and was waving something at us.

"Lily Kendall thinks you k-k-know s-s-something about—" Victor was way ahead of me. By the time I caught up with him all thoughts of what Lily had hinted were driven out of my mind. The minister was waving a much-worn brown handbag.

"There's your bag, Judy!" Victor called. "Where did you find it, Mr. DeWitt?"

"Why, right there." He pointed out a young juniper bush beside the path which ran in back of where the fishhouse had stood. We'd all been on that path innumerable times and not seen my bag.

"Th-thank you very much."

I hunted for Bessie's key. Yes, there it was. Now she could lock her bedroom door and I could give the artist back his key. My coin purse was O. K., too, with a little change in it. Also, I saw at a glance, the lovely compact a girl friend had sent me from Florida.

I was torn between going to assist my poor aunt and the desire to see if the money was still in my room. Victor had had plenty of time to get into the storeroom, so I didn't feel afraid. Besides, the wind had blown my hair till it was a sight. I needed a couple of minutes before a mirror. Not mine. I'd only scout a moment and then go into Auntie's room.

Hugh stopped me in the hall. "Wait a minute, Judy. I was just going back to the church for you. Do you think it's safe for you to hang around that Quade fellow alone?" He tried to hold me by putting his hand over mine on the newel post.

I yanked away. I was so mad I forgot he was a guest. "Suppose you attend to your own affairs. And your sister's."

The thrust shot home. He stepped back. "I was only considering your safety, Judy. You—you know I—Bessie and I, like you."

"Well, thanks, Hugh. Don't mind me. Here, give your sister her key. Where is she? I'll do it myself."

"She's powdering her nose. Then we're going down to the bridge with the gang. Will you come, too?"

He was being decent after I'd been pretty rude.

"You bet I'm coming. Wait for me, too."

"Well, don't be long. Some of 'em have already started. Poor Mr. Quincy is wheeling himself."

"Go help him then. Bessie can come with me." I tore up to my room, and after a trembling moment went boldly in. The money was still there.

"Ssssh, beat it," came from a crack in the storeroom door. "How can I ever trap anybody with you—?"

I ran out and closed my door again. "You won't. They're all going to the bridge. I—I only wanted to powder my nose." I opened my bag and took out the powder pouch, pressing the lid. Then I nearly catapulted down the stairs.

Roddy Lane's square-cut diamond gleamed pinkly through the powder. "Oh! oh! oh! oh!" I slumped weakly down on the top step, groaning aloud. Victor came out of his hiding place and told me to shush. I handed him the pouch, just as Bessie Norcross peeked around the banisters.

"What's the matter, Judy? You sick?"

"She's a little faint, and no wonder," Victor answered for me. I never saw anybody recover himself so quickly as Victor Quade. "Don't try to show me the plan of the house till you feel better, Miss Jason," he said, solicitously, knowing full well Bessie had caught him up there. "Shall I call your aunt?"

I had presence of mind enough to press my hand against my side.

"It's nothing. Just a stitch in my side. Getting old," I tried to laugh. I saw Victor putting my pouch in his pocket. Would he think I'd stolen the ring from that awful hand? "Your key. Here it is, Miss Norcross." I tossed it to her as she came part way upstairs. "Hugh is waiting for you. You two go along. You, too, Mr. Quade. I'll be all right now. The pain's gone."

Let her think what she wanted to; it couldn't be helped. By the time we reached the piazza our guests were ambling toward the bridge. Uncle Wylie had already gone down, my aunt said, scolding because I put off setting the luncheon dishes out. He'd beaten the whole of us, taking the minister's car, as he explained later, when he'd seen a truck skimming along the Neck.

Hugh Norcross was helping Mr. Quincy into another car, Potter's presumably, over near the garage. De Witt already had a front seat.

"Wait for us," Victor called, but they didn't. Perhaps they didn't hear him. Anyway, they were started before we were down the walk.

"Why don't you go back, Judy?" "No, no. You don't think—I've got to know. You couldn't believe I'd touch—"

"Of course not, my dear girl. Some friend has not only made a

"Nobody's been down there evidently."

tool of you, but now is trying to implicate you further. That's the same ring?"

"Looks like it. Not sure of course."

Victor's stride increased. "Good grief! Look—that first car is coming back again!"

The car with my uncle in it! And the truck was rapidly disappearing down the long curving Neck.

"Won't be long now. Keep mum about the ring, Judy."

We hurried along to meet the two cars, which were now stopping midway and holding a powwow.

"Everything jake?" Victor shouted as we came up.

They didn't answer, but kept talking among themselves in a puzzled manner.

"Everything O. K.?" Victor repeated.

"Dunno." Uncle Wylie, who was leaning against the steering wheel of the minister's car, opened the door for us to get in.

"He isn't sure the feller heard him," Hugh said.

"Milkman, wasn't it?"

"Uh-huh. Him, all right." Uncle Wylie said. "Nearly ran the truck over into the gap. I shouted to get the police. 'Been a murder!' I yelled. 'We want the police!' But he answered sort of queer."

"What did he say?"

"Can't hear you! Wind's agin me too strong! Joke's on you!"

Uncle Wylie scratched his scraggy head, windblown every which way. "Ain't sartin he understood. I yelled 'Murder!' again. 'Order!' he yells back, plain as day, 'count of the land breeze. Here 'tis. How'll I git it over?'"

"And you told him to get the police?"

"Sartin. 'Git the police!' I nearly split my throat. Cupped my hands and hollered." My uncle's eyes twinkled. He didn't often get the center of attention.

"Do hurry up, Uncle Wylie. What did he say?" I implored.

"Hold your horses, Judy. Let's get this straight," he said, and my uncle began to chuckle. "What makes you so concerned polite all of a sudden, Wylie? I'll leave the order right here and you can git it in a boat. That'll learn you not to bust any more bridges on the Fourth." Then he went off laughing.

"But surely he'll tell everyone he meets about the bridge," Victor said. "Even if he believes it was a prank."

"Will if he thinks of it," my uncle said, lighting his old corncob pipe. "Hop in, you folks. Nothin' to do here. I got some clams to shuck."

We got in. "If you'd only waited for Mr. De Witt," I said, "he could have made them hear way down to Rockville."

"Didn't you tell him we didn't have a boat?" Hugh and Mr. Quincy asked the same question that was in my mind.

"Don't know's I did. Why should I?" Uncle could be so exasperating sometimes. "Got a boat, ain't we, up in the loft of the garage?"

"Well, for the love of Christmas!—why didn't you say so? Drive on!" screamed the minister.

"Didn't say so because she—she leaks!"

Their car made the difficult about face on the narrow road, and I held my breath while Uncle Wylie followed suit. I didn't want to plunge into those swirling waters, dangerous at any time, despite the peaceful-looking marshland beyond.

I was wondering why my uncle hadn't spoken about his boat before. He could repair any leak that ever sprang. I was also beginning to wonder if he'd told the truth about the milkman. Nobody else was present. It was quite possible Aunt Nella had sicked him on to being Horatio at the Bridge just to keep the police away a little longer, in the hopes that some of the mystery would solve itself. I said as much to Victor.

"He, yes, and his wife, too, can't wish to keep quiet about what's under the tarpaulin."

Aunt Nella was standing in the doorway waiting for the milk for her chowder. Did she think they could throw it across?

"You might have rigged up a breeches buoy!" she accused.

There! She'd struck it. If nobody came to the bridge, if the boat couldn't be made seaworthy right away, couldn't we rig a breeches buoy of some sort? But Victor didn't listen to me. He and the men went across to the old barn where the boat was stored in the loft.

"I loathe steamed clams," Bessie Norcross grumbled, when she heard my aunt's luncheon alternative. Bessie had been cleaning the spot on her coat with some smelly fluid. Now she draped it over the hammock to dry. Personally I thought she'd made it much worse, with the encircling yellowish gray rings.

I stooped to pick up a couple of Lily Kendall's crystal beads. Lovely beads, they were; expensive. I hoped she'd saved enough to have them restrung. It was then I realized she hadn't been with us on the Neck. I ran up and knocked on her door, but, receiving no answer, hurried down again.

"Where's Miss Kendall?"

Bessie shrugged. "Haven't seen her. Been locked in my room. Hughie called to me not to bother about the old bridge, so I've been right here. He thought I'd been overdoing. Look, they're coming back from the garage."

"How's the boat? Any good?" They all answered together. I gathered it was unseaworthy.

"Hole in her big as a bucket," Mr. Q. shrilled gleefully.

"Somebody chopped it on purpose," Potter added.

"If I find out who in tunket dared to do sech a thing—I!" Poor Uncle Wylie. He looked like a little mad bantam rooster.

Hugh went up and sat beside his sister. "Glad we came by train, Sis. Our car wasn't in that barn. Neither of us had occasion to enter it."

I saw the clergyman turn so purple I thought he'd have an apoplectic stroke, when the artist's jaw dropped ludicrously.

"Open all the time, isn't it?" Victor saved the day.

"Sartin. 'Cept when I lock up at night. Keep my own old Fordie in there when she hain't in the back yard. You can see her now, with a busted axle, et cetera."

"Anybody seen Miss Kendall?" I cut in. "She's not with us and she's not in her room."

That was odd in itself. Lily Kendall never missed anything. She was, as Thaddeus Quincy had put it—ubiquitous. Well, she wasn't ubiquitous now. She wasn't in sight.

"Make sure, Judy," Victor said.

"Look all around, will you?" His face was clouded with anxiety. He started down the path as if he were quite sure I wouldn't find Lily in the house.

"Will you wait?"

He nodded. "I'll walk slowly. You call 'yes' or 'no' from the door. I'm going to look at the—the ruins of the fire."

Aunt Nella called me to come and help her. Was Miss Kendall with her? I asked. No, nor in the parlor. Nor her room. Nor the bathroom. Nor the lavatories. I tore out to tell Victor.

"Oh, Mr. Quade—that cry! You said it was a gull."

"Nonsense. It was a gull." But his eyes belied his words. "Norcross! Potter! De Witt! You, too, Wylie! Please make it snappy." Victor was positively running now, with me at his heels and the rest after us.

As I hurried along I was conscious that the tide must have turned, and with it the wind, for a refreshing salt breeze changed the air into one of New England's perfect summer days. It wasn't sultry any more; I didn't feel so tired despite all the racing around I'd done that terrible morning.

THE APPEARANCES AFTER THE RESURRECTION

LESSON TEXT—John 20:19-31. GOLDEN TEXT—I am alive for evermore.—Revelation 1:18.

The most important day in all history was the first day of the week following the crucifixion of Christ. Then He appeared to His disciples as their risen Lord. All the hope of all mankind for all eternity depended on His victory over death.

By eventide news had come to the disciples of His resurrection, and half in hope and half in uncertainty they had gathered to talk over these matters. Fearful of the Jews, they met behind closed doors. All at once He was there—the Lord Himself. What a wonderful change came over them as He made Himself known to them. They went

I. From Fear to Gladness (vv. 19, 20).

Their eyes had been upon their enemies and they were afraid. Now they "were glad, when they saw the Lord." We need to learn that lesson. If we look within we are ashamed and discouraged. If we look around us we are confused and fearful. If we look to Christ we are glad and strong.

Notice that their joy was not based only on an emotional impulse. They saw Christ in His resurrected body—the very One who had died. The evidence was there before them. Now they could understand the things He had said to them. The whole realm of spiritual truth was now in focus again, and they were glad. So are we when we really see Christ.

II. From Weakness to Strength (vv. 21-23).

The disciples who were called to be witnesses for Christ had lost their testimony when He died on the cross. Unbelief and discouragement had so weakened them that they were in hiding instead of being out proclaiming His truth.

Now the risen and victorious One sent them forth with the Father's blessing. They were empowered by the Holy Spirit, and given great authority (v. 23). Note that it was given not to one man or to the leaders, but to all the disciples. It was "a declarative right, and it belongs to every true disciple. Those who have received the gift of the Holy Spirit are in a position to declare to men that their sincere repentance brings forgiveness" (Douglass). The opposite is also true.

III. From Doubt to Faith (vv. 24-28).

Thomas, who had doubts and who cultivated them by his stubborn attitude (v. 25), did himself and his brethren a serious disservice by being absent from the meeting on the evening of the first Easter Day. When he did appear he had only doubts to contribute. Let those who make a custom of absenting themselves from the place and hour of service beware lest they do likewise.

His doubts were honest ones—and God always meets such questions, honestly and intelligently. When the evidence was before him, the heart of Thomas leaped the chasm from doubt to faith in one cry of complete devotion (v. 28).

It is significant that down through the ages many doubters have been won to Christ by the proof of the resurrection of Christ, which is by the testimony of historical scholars "the best authenticated fact in all history." The risen Christ stands before men today and says, "Be not faithless but believing." May many respond with Thomas, "My Lord and my God."

IV. From Death to Life (vv. 29-31).

Christ arose from the dead not just to show that He had power to do so, but, as Paul puts it, "for our justification" (Rom. 4:25). The reality and dependability of the entire plan of salvation hinged on the return of Christ from the dead. Had the grave held Him, His claims of deity and of the ability to forgive sin would have been entirely discredited. Because He lives we shall live.

The experience of regeneration is therefore likened in Scripture to a passing from death to life (John 5:24). Thomas saw the Lord, and believing, passed from doubt to faith. We cannot see Him now, but we have the blessed privilege of believing and thus receiving life (vv. 29, 31).

This was the message which the now radiant and empowered disciples went out to preach. The book of Acts tells us how effectively they did it, and shows how much of their preaching centered on the fact of the resurrection.

The command and the commission was not to them alone, but also to all of us who believe in Christ. May God take out of us the fear of men, overcome our weakness, and send us out with renewed faith to make this life-giving message known to our fellow men.

Medical officers have long recognized tobacco as an aid to morale among our armed forces. Surveys among the men themselves have shown that tobacco is their favorite gift. If you have a friend or relative in the Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard who smokes a pipe or rolls his own, nothing would be more appreciated than a pound of his favorite tobacco. Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know I'm back in Florida again. Well how are you all. I'm fine and have been receiving the Tinley Park Times regular.

It sure is nice to sit down and read the old home town paper. Well I haven't much news outside of I've been working pretty hard.

Dear Friends:

Just a line to let you know that my new address is: Mister E. W. Wolak, Warrant Officer A. U. S., Cochran Field, Macon, Georgia. My serial number has been changed to W-213011.

I had two nice cross country flights over the Great Smokie Mountains, its a beautiful ride, and it also gives you a little scare every once in a while when the plane drops from under. I don't think much of Tennessee all you can do in the Cities is eat and breath. There's no dancing at any time in the City limits and no movies on Sunday.

The men get paid in a few minutes so I'll have to close for now.

Dear Friends:

This letter is to let you know of my new address. I have finished my basic training and now I am going to an Aircraft Armour school. At present I am studying the different types of Aircraft machine guns. I will be here for at least 9 weeks. I go to school six days a week. It's quite hard to say whether I am learning much about being an Armorer because it seems every time I turn around they want my assistance at K. P. I guess that goes with the course.

AMERICANS!

ALL OUT FOR VICTORY

IN 1943

Today and not tomorrow, co-operation is needed from all of us—such close co-operation as never before in our life time has been or will be asked of us. For the duration of this war we must pull together. Our liberties, our lives, and our standard of living—the best of any nation in the world—are at stake. This war can be won, or lost, here on the home front!

Uncle Sam is asking us to do all we can. We want this war ended as quickly as possible with the United Nations on the long end. We will win! Nothing will stop us. This war has been forced on us and we good Americans are not going to take it sitting down. As proof we have accomplished more since the sneaky attack on Pearl Harbor than our fondest dreams thought possible. We offer here a simple but very important suggestion for us on the home front which we feel will help to discharge a greater aid financially to our brave men and women on the high seas and fighting fronts in all parts of the world, without peril to our present budget, of income. Our suggestion is a very simple one. Just do all our buying in our respective communities. Our neighboring towns and cities have their battles and are fighting them. We must do the same. This suggestion complies, too, with our Government's wishes to conserve on everything that is conducive to the war effort. There is no better merchandise variety or stock service or professional service to be had anywhere than right here in our communities.

EVERYBODY INVITED!

"Why I look only half my age"

Pardon me for bragging, but I do look as young and can do as good work as a brand new electric iron.

Of course, all the credit goes to my owner for giving me special wartime care.

She knows that the materials ordinarily used to make electric irons are now needed for war production, so she's making sure that I keep in good condition for the duration.

I think it's a swell idea, and suggest that you give your electric iron this care, too.

Each time, after using the iron and it has cooled off, wipe the sole plate with a damp cloth. If necessary, use soap suds or mild scouring powder, but don't immerse the iron in water.

Every month, rub the sole plate with paraffin or beeswax.

If your iron has a detachable cord, always plug the cord into the iron before plugging it into the wall outlet.

When you've finished ironing, remove the plug from the outlet first, then from the iron. Never pull on the cord.

And remember, don't let the cord touch the hot iron or rub on the edge of the ironing board. Either may wear off the insulation.

Most cases of damaged irons are caused by dropping them.

So make sure your ironing table is steady. Always rest the iron on the heel rest, the stand or the insulating pad.

Another way to save wear and tear on your iron is to avoid running over buttons, hooks and other hard objects which may injure the sole plate.

What if something does go wrong?

If your iron shows signs of overheating, have it inspected by a service man right away.

If the iron fails to operate, before deciding that it is out of order, make sure the plug is in, the appliance switch is on, and the outlet is "alive".

This little check-up may save you money and spare you some anxious moments.

The wounded can't wait...

Want A University?

Good morning! Are you trying to get a University of Illinois for your town? Just as if one state university is not enough for Illinois, the president of the Southern Illinois State Teachers College, Carbondale, is trying to have the state legislature change the scope of his college and enlarge it to a state university to be known as the University of Southern Illinois. Perhaps the distinguished Carbondale educator has read in the papers that California has a University of California in Berkeley for the populous San Francisco area and the northern part of the state, and a University of Southern California for the populous Los Angeles area and the southern part of the state. The fact that California is twice as long, north and south, as Illinois, that the University of California at Los Angeles is more than twice as far from Berkeley as Carbondale is from Urbana-Champaign, and that the two California universities are a greater distance from each other than Cairo on the Ohio river and the Illinois Wisconsin state line, don't seem to bother him. What he wants is a state university in Carbondale, whether it is needed or not. The state taxpayers will pay the bill and Carbondale will get the gravy. It's a swell idea for Carbondale.

But the end is not there. Comes now Senator Downing of Macomb, seat of the Western State Teachers College, who says, if Carbondale is going to have a University of Southern Illinois, he wants a University of Western Illinois. So far as we have heard, no word has come from DeKalb, home of the Northern Illinois State Teachers College, but in all justice to that section of the state why let its rivals in the teachers college field steal the show? Why shouldn't DeKalb, also, have a state university?

Now let's get closer to home. Waverly doesn't have a University of Illinois, either. In all this section of the state of which our fair city is the center, there is not one single state university. One of the state's first educational centers, fate has dealt unkindly with the plans of Waverly's founders. Those stalwart Connecticut idealists, led by the Salters from New Haven, home of Yale university, who came here in 1835 and platted the future city of Waverly, established The Seminary long before anyone ever dreamed of a Southern Illinois State Teachers College. Why not a re-birth of that institution of higher learning and repay a debt to Waverly for educating the pioneers by giving us a nice, new Southeastern Morgan County University of Illinois? And Waverly has a worthwhile contribution to make, one filled with sentiment, yet practical. The original Seminary bell, still clear of tone as when it sounded across the prairies in the bleak days of over a century ago, occupies a treasured niche here. No doubt the Congregational church, possessor of this historic bell, and the sentiment that goes with it could be induced to part with it if it could be returned to its original use of calling students to their Latin, Greek and Higher Mathematics classes.

What do you say, Messrs. Searcy, Green, Lawler and Sullivan?

Mokena Bowling News

Braun's Recreation Smokers laid down a heavy smoke screen as they swept three games from the Robins. The Smokers terrific smoke barrage in the early games completely smoked out the Tavern crew and they never recovered their bearings for the night. Fred Werner was the big stogie in the drive which cut the Robins lead to two games and a chance for Gus Braun's red hot team to overtake the leaders in the two remaining nights.

The Mokena Bankers emerged the victor in the deciding game with the Mokena Wallpapers after each had won a game. Willard Martie's game of 198 was the important factor in winning this game for the Bankers. The Bankers and Paperhangers have been contesting all season in pushing each other into the cellar but neither team has had more than one game advantage.

FLASH! Here is news: V-Eighters win a game—After losing nine straight games in a row, they finally tuned-up their motors and roared to victory with driver, 'Ham' Hamilton leading the way with a 204 game. This remained only as a flash as the Mokena Oilers took the odd game from the V-Eighters after the two teams had won a game each. By winning two games the Oilers have a three game lead for 3rd place and a chance to overtake the Smokers provided that they lose their smoke.

Another news flash! Largest crowd of bowling fans jammed every available seat as they gave moral support for the teams. It was another night of fun for everyone and it appears that interest is increasing as the season is running to a close.

Next week the three ring circus will present—The main attraction in ring one, alleys 1 and 2, Robinson's Tavern vs Mokena Paperhangers. This is the night Marschki, Buschel and Company have been looking forward to. The last time these two teams met, the Paperhangers won 3 games and they are boasting that they can do it again.

In ring 2, alleys 3 & 4, we have Braun's Recreation Smokers vs Cooper & Hostert's V-Eighters. With the Smokers in the midst of a winning streak and the indication from last night that the V-Eighters have actually tuned-up their motors, this may prove to be very closely contested games and maybe an upset of the Smokers.

In ring 3, alleys 5 & 6, we have the Mokena Bankers vs Mokena Oilers. This should prove to be a good attraction if not the best of the night as the Phillips 66 gang is out for 2nd place and the Mokena Wall Street Brokers will try to keep from crashing the cellar. Well fans, what do you think? Come out next Monday night.

Camp Blanding, Fla.

Dear Mr. Semmler: First of all I want to thank you for the News-Bulletin which I've been getting every week. The news takes about a 1000 miles off the distance between us. Also I want you to notice that my address is changed. I was transferred to my new battery three weeks ago.

Right now we are enjoying the grandest weather. It is so warm that many of the boys go swimming in the lake on the post. I celebrated St. Patrick's Day by swimming and it was grand. Of course that was only part of the celebrating—the afternoon part.

Camp Blanding is a very pretty camp. It is located about 50 miles W. of St. Augustine and built around a small lake, with a very nice beach all around it. My barracks is not far from the lake and the infirmary where I work is on the drive around the lake. From our front door we could throw a stone to the beach. There are flowers and trees in bloom nearly all the time. But we have cold weather too. During part of Jan., all of Feb., up to about a week ago, we've had very cold weather. Two nights the water pipes froze and one morning I saw icicles. And its very damp, which goes thru me like an ice pick. Sometimes I've wished I was in Tinley Park with its ice and deep snow so I could take off my winter underwear.

I'm in the medical Dept. We take care of all the soldier's aches and pains—mostly foot ailments and back sprains. Sometimes assist at a minor operation. We have some military training, both in field and class room and on alternate days we have long hikes. Other days are spent in exercise: push-ups, rolling and tumbling, go over obstacle course where we climb high fences, swing from ropes, walk hand over hand hanging from horizontal bars, climb up and down a rope net, all to develop the physique of the army man and to train him to help protect himself in combat.

When ever you meet a friend of mine in Mokena or Tinley Park, tell them that I send my best wishes to them. And I hope you are enjoying good health and that your paper will be a success always. You dont know the happiness it brings to me. I look forward to getting it every Tuesday.

With the best of good wishes and good health, I am,

Mark A. Hotchkiss.

March 20, 1943.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I wish to thank you for the paper, as receiving it, is one of the high spots of the week. But for some reason since I left St. Warren, I haven't received it. Probably because of the change of address.

I'm in Officer's Candidate School now. This is really rough as our schedule calls for 14 1/2 duty hours a day, and we generally put in more. We stand daily inspections and everything is very strictly military. The course is 13 weeks, and so far very stiff all the way.

Just got out the hospital today, after a case of measles. So I will probably start all over and lose the three weeks that I've been in school.

Sincerely yours,

Cadet Frederick Wayne Raiser, Co. 'G', 2nd, QM School Reg., Bldg. 1813, Camp Lee, Va.

A YEAR AGO
A year ago we talked about the Yanks—
The Dodgers and the Cards—just heading south.
(We'd never known the taste of blazing tanks
Or what can happen from a cannon's mouth.)
We wondered what DiMaggio would hit,
Ted Williams—Johnny Mize—you know the thrills
That come from camps, from plate to pitching pit,
As spring comes stumbling in across the hills.
A year ago—how far away that seems—
How far away—how long—how long ago—
As diving bombers blast away our dreams,
And shell fire wrecks the world we used to know.
But day and night, each great crash seems to sing—
"Some day—old kid—there'll be another spring."

The Phillies That Were

WHAT a break it would be for Bill Cox, the new owner of the Phillies, if he could only dig up again some "Phillies that used to be."

How many remember that Napoleon Lajoie and Ed Delehanty, the two great hitters of their day, were on the Phillies together around 1902?

To mention only a few others—Grove Alexander, Bill Killefer, Red Doin, Beauty Bancroft, Bucky Walters, Kirby Higby, Claude Passeau, Dolph Camilli, Sherry Magee, Dick Bartell, Spud Davis, Chuck Klein, these and many others.

The Phillies have had enough good ballplayers to win several pennants. But most of these stars were sold as the old Phillies became one of the main farming systems for the National league.

Their stars helped to win pennants for Giants, Cubs, Reds and Dodgers. These Philly stars were largely responsible for at least ten pennants, all flown far away from the majestic metropolis of the late Benjamin Franklin and William Penn.

Owner Cox says he intends to kill this selling traffic completely, rebuilding through an aggressive policy that will take both capital and a smart scouting system. Not forgetting a hustling manager.

Delehanty and Lajoie

To show how far baseball salaries have advanced, you need only to look back to Napoleon Lajoie and Ed Delehanty.

Around 1903, this pair were the greatest hitters of their time. Both were in the .400 bracket, and both were also sluggers. Delehanty still holds the all-time record with Bobby Lowe, when he hit for 17 bases in a game—four home runs and a single. Lou Gehrig almost wrecked them both when he had four home runs in Philadelphia—and a mighty wallop that came close to being a fifth home run—or at least a three-base hit—in his fifth time at bat.

That year Delehanty asked for $3,000 a year and Lajoie for $2,500. The Phillies gave Delehanty his $3,000, but Lajoie was turned down on his $2,500 offer.

So Larry promptly jumped to Cleveland in the American league, where Charlie Somers offered him $8,000.

This started an inter-league and a legal war. Lajoie was barred from playing in Pennsylvania, which meant Philadelphia.

He slipped through Pennsylvania once where, according to Charlie Dryden, he traveled on a fruit steamer disguised as a bunch of bananas.

Anyway, Philadelphia lost one of the greatest ball players of all time—Napoleon Lajoie—because the Phillies wouldn't give him $2,500 a year.

The New Phillies

The Phillies for 40 years have pulled more boners than all other clubs thrown together.

They have set a world's record for inefficiency in one of the best sporting cities this country knows.

Philadelphia is one of our top sporting centers—baseball, football, boxing or the rest of it.

But certainly, as far as the Phillies are concerned, Philadelphia has run into a horrible deal.

Philadelphia has known more tail enders, even including the Athletics, than any two cities I happen to remember.

But Connie has won ten pennants. The Phillies have won one.

Philadelphia has too fine a sporting tradition to be known as the Subway Capitol or the Cellar Kingdom.

If Bill Cox can only prove that he is out to give Philadelphia the best team available, an improving ball club, he will set one of the all-time records.

The Phillies have a long way to go. Just average methods won't help

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ALTHOUGH every big-time sport has suffered from necessary wartime restrictions, golf has taken some of the hardest whacks of all. Occasionally a few paragraphs concerning golf creep into the sports pages. They usually deal with some well-known player whose induction into the service merits a short story. Or perhaps a champion is playing a modest benefit match in some part of the country.

Major tournaments are out. Even the PGA decided against its show for this year. The North and South tournament at Pinehurst will be played, but entrance requirements are on a unique basis. If a player is under 38 he can't play unless he is in uniform, on leave. For the first time an adult championship has an age limit—excluding the senior matches.

Most of the golf pros are rather young, and few have children. The circuit tours mean a roving existence and the boys usually wait until they've grown older and made their stake before starting a family life.

The Civilian Game

Big time golf is out until the war's end. And civilian golf is confronted with problems which are going to be difficult—and, in some cases, impossible—to solve. Fairways are not easy to maintain, and help is difficult to get. Civilian golf likely will run to week-end play.

It probably won't be unusual to see John H. Duffer help keep the course in playable shape. Some private clubs have organized worker-member committees. It is entirely possible that these committees will be successful in many localities—particularly smaller towns and cities.

Golf took a terrific boom after the last war. Most of the great stars came to the front—including Bobby Jones and Gene Sarazen. Golf's winter tours were inaugurated and became an important part of the game.

Those days saw the game's most opulent period. There was nothing unusual about a $5,000 tournament. Big ones paid from $10,000 to $15,000. Yet the greatest of them all—the National Open—paid only $1,000 to the winner. As an indication of the times, Walter Hagen signed as pro at St. Petersburg for $30,000 for the winter season—a record price.

Country Clubs

The situation wasn't too healthy. Golf clubs were transformed into elaborate country clubs. They were more like night clubs with gymnastic facilities available upon request. Every locker held its quota of liquid refreshments. Club officials were in an expansive frame of mind.

The depression changed the picture. Almost all clubs were forced to retrench—some of them closed. Players didn't have the money to spend and golfing costs became more moderate.

The end of this war won't see another era of gaudiness. Today's players represent a truer cross section of the public as a whole. More and more workers are playing the game, and they aren't going to give it back to the playboys.

Such a situation augurs well for the game. With such a huge investment in the sport, it would be worse than folly to allow its appeal to be narrowed. Two USGA officials—George Blossom, president, and Joe Dey, secretary—have compiled some amazing figures for your inspection.

Their figures show that a known total of 2,351,000 play the game on 5,209 golf courses comprising more than a half-million acres. It has been estimated that the clubs used more than 600,000 caddies.

The wages paid to caddies ran more than $30,000,000 a year. These figures haven't included the amounts paid to thousands of professionals, greens keepers and other workers needed by each course.

Statistics tell only part of the story. Golf has a big advantage over any other sport. It provides exercise for player and spectator alike. The average spectator following a big match gets fully as much exercise as the player. His ditch-jumping six-mile hike definitely is good for the muscles. And the gate receipts of the major tournaments help boost golf as big business in any man's language.

When war was declared in December of 1941 the investment in golf was estimated at $726,000,000. This includes land, courses, clubhouses, etc., and is only a part of the total outlay which runs far more than a billion dollars.

Despite the huge investment, golf is no longer only a rich man's game. It is only because it is a game for the masses that so much money has been spent on courses. Golf has been a lifesaver for thousands of men—and women—who need exercise and relief from business complications and worries.

Soil Management Aid To Increasing Yields

Farmers Co-operating in Test Get Good Results

Larger yields of grain and better stands of hay are becoming increasingly important these days when the demand for cereal, meat and dairy products for war and civilian needs has reached such record peaks. Whether the output of these crops is large or small on a particular farm depends largely on the condition of the soil that produces them, according to Prof. C. J. Chapman of the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin.

That such crops respond to soil management is evident from tests carried on in a number of Wisconsin counties in which fertilizers containing phosphorus and potash were applied to small grains and seedings of clover and alfalfa.

Farmers co-operating in the tests laid out demonstration plots on their land, leaving one area unfertilized. The results in the form of grain yields and hay crops that followed them in the rotation were checked and compared. The harvests showed that not only was the output of the small grains boosted, but the production of hay that followed in the rotation was greatly increased. The tests showed, too, that the soil improving treatments had a valuable carry-over benefit.

Typical of the results obtained were tests on farms in Portage county.

Allen G. Hunsaker of Afton, Wyo., whose four sons are now in the armed forces, installed a milking machine to help out. He is now carrying on with the aid of his wife and 13-year-old daughter. He now milks 20 high grade Holsteins which produce 15,000 pounds of milk per month, in comparison with the 16 cows he milked last year which averaged 10,000 pounds per month.

ty on silt loam and sandy loam soil types of varying fertility levels. On one silt loam plot where 300 pounds of an 0-20-20 fertilizer were applied per acre in 1941, the grain yield was 51.9 bushels compared with 31.1 bushels per acre on the unfertilized field. The 1942 hay crop on the fertilized field was 5,493 pounds, as against 1,186 pounds—or an increase of 4,307 pounds per acre.

A sandy loam plot treated likewise with 300 pounds per acre of an 0-20-20 yielded 25.2 bushels, compared with 19.2 on the untreated plot.

Eliminate Hazards!

Unless soldiers on the farm front are careful, an army of nearly 4,500 farm workers will be killed this year by mechanized equipment and livestock.

"That's why we say that heroism isn't confined to the front battle lines in this war," farm families were told by E. W. Lehmann, head of the agricultural engineering department, University of Illinois college of agriculture.

The shortage of labor, inexperienced machine operators and use of older machinery will aggravate the situation for the duration.

In Illinois alone, nearly 300 farmers lost their lives in producing and delivering food to market in 1941. Thousands were crippled for life; more thousands were crippled temporarily.

Accidents during wartime are not merely family and community tragedies. Many times they are the result of criminal negligence. Accidents that kill and injure American food-for-freedom producers aid the enemies.

Agricultural Notes

Sudden changes of temperature in dairy barns or in poultry houses reduce production of eggs and milk. Cows and hens do not work overtime to replace shortages from the day before.

WPB has assigned top priority rating of AA-1 to assure delivery of critical material necessary for manufacture of farm machinery included in the current program.

DODGED THE ISSUE

The patient with stomach trouble was told by his doctor that he had been drinking too much and would have to stop. "But," said the patient, "what shall I tell my wife is wrong with me?"

"Oh," said the doctor after a little thought, "tell her you are suffering from syncope. That should satisfy her."

The patient did. "What is syncope?" asked his wife. "I don't know," he replied, "but that's what the doctor told me."

When her husband had gone, she looked the word up in the dictionary, which defined "syncope" as "irregular movement from bar to bar."

Blackout Defined

A teacher in a country school was trying to impress on the minds of the children the importance of civilian defense. She asked the children to give their ideas of a perfect blackout, for which a prize would be given.

Next day the answers were brought and the prize was awarded for this: "A blind black man, dressed in a black suit, in a coal cellar with the doors shut, on a foggy night, and without a light, groping among the coals for a blind black cat."

NEEDS A HAND

"Here comes the parade. Where's aunt?"
"She's upstairs waving her hair."
"Goodness, can't we afford a flag?"

Well 'Rewarded'

With much thought and licking of pencil, Private Jones was writing home to his mother. His letter began:

"Dear Mother—I am doing fine. Last week I was on sentry and stopped the colonel because he'd forgotten the password. Next morning he complimented me on parade."
"Since then I have been put on every dirty fatigue going."

Bar Interlude

After a young lawyer had talked for 3½ hours to the jury, which felt like convicting him instead of the defendant, his opponent, a veteran of the bar, arose, looked sweetly at the judge, and said:

"Your honor, I will follow the example of my young friend, who has just finished, and submit the case without argument."

Without Reason

Walking along a lane in England one bright, sunny morning, the vicar met a local farmer driving some cows.

"Spring in the air, Mr. Giles," he hailed the man cheerily.
"Whatever for, sir?" replied the farmer in amazement.

Circumstantial

"I'm afraid that new cashier you sent me is dishonest."
"Oh, come now! You shouldn't judge by appearances."
"I didn't; it's disappearances in this case."

A butcher had a note delivered to him by a small girl. It read:

What He Likes

"Do you know what I like most about golf?"

"I don't know, I am sure, unless it is bragging about your score afterward."

Pour strained honey over cut grapefruit and fill in the spot where the core was removed, then broil until lightly browned. Delicious for breakfast, luncheon or as a dinner dessert.

The tiny screws in eye glasses may be tightened with a cuticle knife.

Olive oil and black ink, equal parts, will restore suede shoes and slippers and remove rustiness.

Comfortable shoes with ordinary heels have been found easier to wear in the kitchen than high-heeled dress shoes, and better for the feet.

Don't keep honey in the refrigerator. It keeps better in the pantry or cupboard.

Fruit beverages and beef tea, though not especially nourishing, are useful stimulants of jaded appetites.

When Your Back Hurts—

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.
